

Chris Gair is widely recognized as one of the preeminent trial lawyers in Chicago. He is a fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers and has tried dozens of cases in federal and state courts and arbitrations. He has also briefed and argued many federal and state appeals. He is recognized by Chambers & Partners as one of Chicago's top lawyers in General Commercial Litigation, White-Collar Crime, and Government investigations.

Chris started his career clerking for the renowned Illinois Supreme Court Justice Seymour Simon. He then served for seven years as an Assistant United States Attorney in Chicago, eventually becoming deputy chief of the Organized Crime Division. He led the landmark prosecutions undertaken by the office during his tenure, including the conviction of the mayor, city council members and appointed officials in Chicago Heights in connection with a long-running extortion, bribery and racketeering enterprise. He prosecuted and convicted long-time Outfit boss Lenny Patrick for running an extortion crew that shook down restaurants, car dealers and other prominent businesses in Chicago. He then flipped Patrick to convict Gus Alex, an Outfit leader since the 1930s who had never even been arrested in more than five decades of criminal activity. Chris also prosecuted and convicted the then head of Chicago's organized crime syndicate, Sam Carlisi, and seven of his subordinates for racketeering, conspiracy to commit murder, extortion, loan-sharking and tax fraud.

Upon leaving the United States Attorney's office, Gair went into private practice and was a partner at two premier litigation firms. He spent eleven years at the well-known boutique Freeman, Freeman & Salzman. There he litigated a number of nationwide antitrust price-fixing cases, including successfully representing major corporations as plaintiffs in three major suits, the Carbon Dioxide, Sorbates, and Bulk Vitamins antitrust cases. He also tried and won a directed verdict for a defendant pharmaceutical manufacturer in the Brand Name Prescription Drugs Antitrust Litigation as well as a multi-million fee sanction against class plaintiffs' counsel. Chris also defended many other high-profile cases, including defending the City Treasurer of Chicago on corruption charges and the Wrigley Field rooftop owners in the civil case brought against them by the Chicago Cubs.

Chris followed with seven years as a partner at Jenner & Block, one of the most prestigious law firms in Chicago. Chris was one of Jenner's top trial lawyers in civil and criminal cases. He led the prosecution of the parties responsible for the collapse of Sentinel Management Group, recovering over $300 million from the Bank of New York Mellon following a trial. He defended the lawyer accused of the largest tax fraud in U.S. history. He successfully defeated a $1 billion claim brought by one of the country's largest hedge funds against its former head of high-frequency trading for alleged misappropriation of trade secrets. He successfully defended Fortune 500 companies in SEC investigations and conducted FCPA investigations in Latin America.

Chris founded the firm in 2013. In recent years he:

- Defended former Alderman Edward Burke, the longest-serving member of the Chicago City Council, on racketeering and bribery charges.
- Defended former Alderman Patrick Daley Thompson on tax fraud and false statements charges and argued his appeal in the United States Supreme Court. Thompson v. United States.
- Won commercial arbitrations for a hedge fund ($4.8 million in damages), a data-analytics firm ($1.8 million), an on-line mortgage banker ($1.2 million), and successfully defeated a $6 million claim against a manufacturer on an earnout agreement.
- Won a $2 million compensatory and punitive damages verdict in a fraud case brought on behalf of his client, a physician who had been cheated by his managing partner, and collecting on the verdict after the defendant attempted to hide assets and claim insolvency.
- Defeated at trial a $5 million dollar whistleblower, fraud and breach of contract claim by a trader against a prominent high-frequency trading company.

Chris is fluent in Spanish and developed a project, funded by USAID, in which he coached prosecutors and police in Mexico in investigating and prosecuting cases for presentation under Mexico's new system of oral trials. He has worked closely with the Procuradurías of the Mexican states of Baja California del Norte, Morelos, and Oaxaca and was a featured speaker at a national conference on justice system reform in Mexico. He has written numerous articles on an eclectic variety of subjects from football's claim to make men out of boys to cross-examination to a book review of a contemporary Spanish novelist.

Chris graduated summa cum laude from Duke University with a major in philosophy. He was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa. After a year working on the gubernatorial campaign of former Senator Adlai Stevenson III, he studied law at the University of Chicago, graduating with honors and as a member of the Order of the Coif.

Chris' avocations are reading Spanish-language novels, running, tennis, hiking and skiing.
